THE MESSAGE

Urges the Repeal of the Silver Act,

To Which is Attributed the Present Financial Depression.

The President Believes That Relief Lies in the Speedy Action of Congress Upon This Line.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The president's message was read in both houses of congress at noon today. Following is the message in full:

To the Congress of the United States:

The existence of an alarming and extraordinary business situation, involving the welfare and prosperity of all our people, has constrained me to call together in extra session of the people's representatives in congress to the end that through a wise and patriotic exercise of the legislative duty, with which they solely are charged, present evils may be mitigated and dangers threatening the future may be averted.

Our unfortunate financial plight is not the result of untoward events, nor of conditions related to our natural resources; nor is it traceable to any of the afflictions which frequently check national growth and prosperity.

With plenteous crops, with abundant promise of remunerative production and manufacture, unusual invitation to safe investment, and with satisfactory assurance to business enterprise, suddenly financial distress and fear have sprung up on every side. Numerous moneyed institutions have suspended because abundant assets were not available to meet the demands of frightened depositors.

Surviving corporations and individuals are content to keep in hand the money they are usually anxious to loan, and those engaged in legitimate business are surprised to find that the securities they offer for loans, though heretofore satisfactory, are no longer accepted. Values supposed to be fixed are fast becoming conjectural, and loss and failure have invaded every branch of business.

DEPRESSION CAUSED BY SILVER PURCHASES

I believe these things are principally chargeable to congressional legislation, touching the purchase and coinage of silver by the general government. This legislation is embodied in a statute passed on the 14th day of July, 1890, which was the culmination of much agitation on the subject involved, and which may be considered a truce, after a long struggle between the advocates of free silver coinage and those intending to be more conservative. Undoubtedly the monthly purchases by the government of 4,500,000 ounces of silver, enforced under that statute, were regarded by those interested in silver production as a certain guaranty of its increase in price. The result, however, has been entirely different, for immediately following a spasmodic and slight rise, the price of silver began to fall after the passage of the act and has since reached the lowest point ever known.

EVILS CONSTANTLY ACCUMULATING.

This disappointing result has led to renewed and persistent efforts in the direction of free silver coinage. Meanwhile not only are the evil effects of the operation of the present law constantly accumulating, but the result to which its execution must inevitably lead is becoming palpable to all who give the least heed to financial subjects.

This law provides that in payment for the 4,500,000 ounces of silver bullion which the secretary of the treasury is commanded to purchase monthly, there shall be issued treasury notes redeemable on demand in gold or silver coin, at the discretion of the secretary of the treasury and that said notes may be reissued. It is, however, declared in the act to be "the established policy of the United States to maintain the two metals on a parity with each other upon the present legal ratio or such ratio as may be provided by law." This declaration so controls the action of the secretary of the treasury as to prevent him exercising the discretion nominally vested in him, if by such action the parity between gold and silver may be disturbed.

DESTROYS THE PARITY OF THE TWO METALS.

Manifestly a refusal by the secretary to pay these treasury notes in gold if demanded, would necessarily result in their discredit and depreciation as obligations payable only in silver, and would destroy the parity between the two metals by establishing a discrimination in favor of gold.

Up to the fifteenth day of July, 1893, these notes had been issued in payment of silver bullion purchases to the amount of more than one hundred and forty-seven millions of dollars. While all but a very small quantity of this bullion remains uncoined and without usefulness in the treasury, many of the notes given in its purchase have been paid in gold.

This is illustrated by the statement that between the first day of May, 1892, and the fifteenth day of July, 1893, the notes of this kind issued in payment for silver bullion amounted to a little more than fifty-four millions of dollars, and that during the same period about forty-nine millions of dollars were paid by the treasury in gold for the redemption of such notes.

DEPLETES OUR GOLD.

The policy necessarily adopted of paying these notes in gold has not spared the gold reserve of one hundred millions of dollars long ago set aside by the government for the redemption of other notes, for this fund has already been subjected to the payment of new obligations amounting to about one hundred and fifty millions of dollars on account of silver purchases, and has, as a consequence, for the first time since its creation, been encroached upon.

We have thus made the depletion of our gold easy, and have tempted other and more appreciative nations to add it to their stock. That the opportunity we have offered has not been neglected, is shown by the large amounts of gold which have been recently drawn from our treasury and exported to increase the financial strength of foreign nations. The excess of exports of gold over its imports for the year ending June 30, 1893, amounted to more than $87,500,000.

Between the first day of July, 1890, and the fifteenth day of July, 1893, the gold coin and bullion in our treasury decreased more than $130,000,000, while during the same period the silver coin and bullion in the treasury increased more than $147,000,000. Unless government bonds are to be constantly issued and sold to replenish our exhausted gold, only to be again exhausted, it is apparent that the operation of the silver purchase law now in force, leads in the direction of the entire substitution of silver for the gold in the government treasury, and that this must be followed by the payment of all government obligations in depreciated silver.

MUST PART COMPANY.

At this stage gold and silver must part company and the government must fail in its established policy to maintain the two metals on a parity with each other. Given over to the exclusive use of a currency greatly depreciated according to the standard of the commercial world, we could no longer claim a place among nations of the first class, nor could our government claim a performance of its obligations, so far as such an obligation has been imposed upon it, to provide for the use of the people the best and safest money.

If, as many of its friends claim, silver ought to occupy a larger place in our currency and the currency of the world through general international co-operation and agreement, it is obvious that the United States will not be in a position to gain a hearing in favor of such an arrangement so long as we are willing to continue our attempt to accomplish the result single handed.

The knowledge in business circles among our own people that our government cannot make its fiat equivalent to intrinsic value nor keep inferior money on a parity with a superior money by its own independent efforts, has resulted in such a lack of confidence at home, in the stability of currency values that capital refuses its aid to new enterprises, while millions are actually withdrawn from the channels of trade and commerce to become idle and unproductive in the hands of timid owners. Foreign investors equally alert not only decline to purchase American securities, but make haste to sacrifice those which they already have.

It does not meet the situation to say that apprehension in regard to the future of our finances is groundless, and that there is no reason for a lack of confidence in the purposes or power of the government in the premises. The very existence of this apprehension and lack of confidence, however caused, is a menace which ought not for a moment to be disregarded. Possibly if the undertaking we have in hand were the maintenance of the specific known quantity of silver at a parity with gold, our ability to do so might be estimated and gauged and perhaps, in view of our unparalleled growth and resources might be favorably passed upon. But when our avowed endeavor is to maintain such parity in regard to an amount of silver increasing at the rate of $50,000,000 yearly, with no fixed termination to such increase, it can hardly be said that a problem is presented whose solution is free from doubt.

The people of the United States are entitled to a sound and stable currency and to money recognized as such on every exchange and in every market of the world. Their government has no right to injure them by financial experiments opposed to the policy and practice of other civilized states nor is it justified in permitting an exaggerated unreasonable reliance on our national strength and ability to jeopardize the soundness of the people's money.

NO PARTY QUESTION.

This matter rises above the plane of party politics. It vitally concerns every business and calling and enters every household in the land. There is one important aspect of the subject which especially should never be overlooked. At times like the present when the evils of unsound finance threaten us the speculator may anticipate a harvest gathered from the misfortune of others, the capitalist may protect himself by hoarding or may even find profit in the fluctuating of values; but the wage earner—the first to be injured by a depreciated currency and the last to receive the benefit of its correction—is practically defenseless. He relies for work upon the ventures of confident and contented capital. This failing him, his condition is without alleviation, for he can neither prey on the misfortunes of others, nor hoard his labor.

One of the greatest statesmen our country has known, speaking more than fifty years ago, when a derangement of the currency had caused commercial distress, said: "The very man of all others who has the deepest interest in a sound currency and who suffers most by mischievous legislation in money matters, is the man who earns his daily bread by his daily toil." These words are as pertinent now as on the day they were uttered, and ought to impressively remind us that a failure in the discharge of our duty at this time must especially injure those of our countrymen who labor, and who, because of their number and condition, are entitled to the most watchful care of their government.

GIVE RELIEF AT ONCE.

It is one of the utmost importance that such relief as congress can afford in the existing situation be afforded at once. The maxim "He gives twice who gives quickly" is directly applicable.

It may be true that the embarrassments from which the business of the country is suffering arise as much from evils apprehended as from those actually existing. We may hope, too, that calm counsels will prevail and that neither the capitalists nor the wage earners will give way to unreasoning panic and sacrifice their property or their interests under the influence of exaggerated fears. Nevertheless, every day's delay in removing one of the plain and principal causes of the present state of things enlarges the mischief already done and increases the responsibility of the government for its existence.

Whatever else the people have a right to expect from congress, they may certainly demand that legislation condemned by the ordeal of three years' disastrous experience shall be removed from the statute books as soon as their representatives can legitimately deal with it.

TARIFF REFORM.

It was my purpose to summon congress in special session early in the coming September that we might enter promptly upon the work of tariff reform, which the true interests of the country clearly demand, which so large a majority of the people have shown by their suffrages desire and expect, and to the accomplishment of which every effort of the present administration is pledged. But while tariff reform has lost nothing of its immediate and permanent importance, and must in the near future engage the attention of congress, it has seemed time that the financial condition of the country should at once, and before all other subjects, be considered by your honorable body.

REPEAL THE PURCHASE SILVER CLAUSE

I earnestly recommend the prompt repeal of the provisions of the act passed July 14, 1890, authorizing the purchase of silver bullion, and that other legislative action may put beyond all doubt or mistake the intention and the ability of the government to fill its pecuniary obligations in money universally recognized by all civilized countries.

Bloody Battle Expected With the Conrad Murderers.

Whitecaps Burn Their House—Three Riderless Horses—The Murderers Are in Ambush.

CORYDON, Ind., Aug. 8.—The whitecaps of Boone township burned the house of the Conrads last night. Yesterday three riderless horses, owned by three whitecaps—John Kendall, William Fish and William Hubbell—were found. It is thought that their owners have been killed by the Conrads, who have returned from Kentucky. They say they have three more men to kill. It is thought they are in hiding in the woods.

Harrison county is excited as it never was before. The murderers are in ambush, and everybody is going armed. The Conrads are asking relatives to help them, and a bloody battle is expected in the next twenty-four hours.

HORSE STEALING.

Francis Douglass Has a Mania for This Kind of Crime.

Spent Eighteen Years in Prison and Now an Old Man, He Follows His Criminal Career.

OSGOOD, Ind., Aug. 8.—Horse stealing has again become a frequent crime in the neighborhood of Osgood, and the thefts are being charged to the account of Francis Marion Douglass, alias "Skinny" Douglass, who has served eighteen years in prison, and several terms in jail, because of a mania for this species of crime. Hundreds of times has he escaped by a narrow margin from the wrath of infuriated farmers. He bears upon his person a full score of wounds received at the hands of officers.

He began stealing horses when but sixteen years old. As he grew older he organized a gang, which operated extensively in southern Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee, and numbered in its membership some of the most noted criminals of the day. It is asserted that one agent of this gang disposed of $50,000 worth of horses annually. Several days ago Douglass stole two fine horses from T. R. Hadley, near Osgood, and swift pursuit led to his capture, near Vevay.

Soon after serving his second term for horse stealing Douglass was arrested by a constable, to whom he offered $500 for his release. The constable doubted his ability to pay such a sum, whereupon Douglass ripped open his coat seam, and showed him where the money was concealed. The constable seemingly concluded to accept the bribe, but after Douglass had paid over the money and was dashing off for liberty, the officer shot him through the back. Part of his right lung was carried away by the bullet, and for months Douglass hovered between life and death. The physicians reported that his case was hopeless, and he was transferred to the care of his mother at Patriot, where he recovered from his frightful wound.

As soon as he could take the saddle he again began horse stealing. Near Brookville he was in the act of saddling a fine horse which he found in a farmer's stable, when he was attacked by the farmer's bull dog. He did not dare to shoot, and he defended himself with a jack-knife, in which the dog was killed after a furious fight. Douglass was horribly bitten. The noise attracted the farmer's family, and as they appeared on the scene he concealed himself by crawling under a hog pen. After they returned to the house he again captured the horse, but as he mounted him to ride away the farmer and his boys reappeared and opened fire. One bullet ripped up his shoulder. Other shots also took effect, but he managed to gallop away. At daylight he was compelled to abandon the horse and conceal himself in a dense cornfield, where he remained for several days unable to move.

Several times Douglass was followed by bloodhounds, and once he only escaped by secreting himself in a stream, where he remained for several hours, with only his nose above the water. Switzerland, Rush, Clark and Ripley counties have taken turns in sending him to the prison south. When released the last time he was a broken down, helpless looking man, forty-nine years old.

FUGITIVES FROM JUSTICE.

Real Estate Men Skip Out With the Money of Their Customers.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 8.—Alderman W. L. Katerline, of the Thirteenth ward, and Arthur N. DeMarest, his partner in the real estate business, disappeared three weeks ago, taking with them about $20,000 belonging to their customers. The two men are fugitives from justice and the police authorities are waiting for an opportunity to serve warrants for embezzlement sworn out against them by O. F. Hollinger, Philip Knopf and others.

The last seen of Katerling and DeMarest in this city was on the day of the assignment about three weeks ago. July 23 they were seen in Milwaukee by persons who knew them, but before steps could be taken to secure their arrest there they made their escape. It is supposed that they took a boat for some Canadian port.

MAY BE LYNCHED.

A Vile Brute is Arrested at Rochelle, Illinois.

ROCHELLE, Ill., Aug. 8.—James Burns assaulted the seven-year-old daughter of Frank Possell, a Northwestern brakeman, yesterday afternoon. A small brother of the girl gave the alarm. The mother came to the rescue and Burns ran away and hid. He was located near the tile factory by Martin Larsen, who arrested him. He was brought to town, fully identified and placed in jail. Cries of "hang him" were heard on every side and last night a close watch was kept to prevent lynching. The girl's father says he will shoot Burns on sight. Unless secretly taken away Burns will probably be lynched.

FALSE PRETENSES.

Arrest of a Member of Governor Pattison's Staff.

READING, Pa., Aug. 8.—Col. A. Harvey Tyson, of Governor Pattison's staff, was arrested at his home last night on a warrant issued at Harrisburg upon information of William F. Harrity, secretary of the commonwealth, charging him with false pretenses. It is alleged that he secured a sum of money, said to be $500, from Secretary Harrity upon his check, which was subsequently protested. Colonel Tyson was recently appointed engineer of the state forestry commission upon the recommendation of Secretary Harrity and others at a salary of $2,500 per annum. He expected to start upon a tour of the state.

CONGRESSIONAL.

The Silver Question Is the Absorbing Theme.

All Other Matters Are Laid Aside for Future Discussion—Relief From the Panic Is the Aim of All.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The senate met at noon and after morning routine took a recess until 12:15 to await the arrival of the president's message. The Rev. Mr. Milburn, the new chaplain of the senate, made the opening prayer. The journal of yesterday was read by the new secretary of the senate, Mr. Cox. The credentials of Mr. George C. Perkins under the appointment of the governor of California in place of the late Senator Standford were presented and he received the oath of office.

The recess having expired, Mr. Harris, of the committee to wait upon the president, reported that the committee had performed that duty and had been informed that the president would communicate with congress immediately. Thereupon Mr. Pruden, one of the president's secretaries, appeared and delivered the message, which was immediately read to the senate by Mr. Johnson, its chief clerk. The president's message was read, ordered to be printed immediately and referred to the finance committee. Various petitions for and against the repeal of the Sherman act were presented and referred.

HOUSE.

The house was called to order promptly at noon, and prayer was offered by the newly elected chaplain, Rev. Dr. Hadaway. The journal, which was a rather long one, was read and approved and the house took a recess until 12:45 p. m.

After the recess Mr. Springer, chairman of the committee appointed to wait upon the president, reported that the president would communicate in writing a message forthwith. Instantly Mr. Pruden, one of the president's secretaries, made his bow and sent the important document to the clerk's desk, where it was read by Clerk Kerr.

The president's message was listened to with interest by the members of the house, and at the conclusion of its reading was greeted with general applause not confined to any section of the chamber. The Michigan election case pending between Richardson and Belknap was then taken up.

The official list of members of the house as prepared by Clerk Kerr, after adjournment yesterday, gives the democrats 220 members, republicans 126 and the third party nine. There is one vacancy, the Tenth Ohio, caused by the death of Representative Enochs, making the whole number 356. The list contains the name of Mr. Richardson, of the Fifth Michigan district, who has not yet been sworn in and whose seat is contested and claimed by Belknap, republican.

As soon as the introduction of bills was in order, Mr. Hill, of New York, introduced a bill to repeal certain sections of the Sherman act and it was referred to the finance committee. That was followed by two bills introduced by Mr. Stewart, of Nevada, one to restore the right of coinage and one (which he said was to meet the existing troubles immediately) to supply a deficiency in the currency. The latter directs the secretary of the treasury to issue silver certificates for the silver bullion now in the treasury in excess of the amount necessary to redeem outstanding certificates, and also to issue $100,000,000 of four per cent. bonds. He made a brief statement in explanation of the latter bill and expressed the hope that it would be acted on without delay. Both bills were referred to the finance committee. Many other bills, financial and otherwise, were introduced and referred.

SANDWICH ISLANDS.

Annexation is Thought to be Their Final Destiny.

VICTORIA, B. C., Aug. 8.—John A. Scott, a resident of the Sandwich Islands for fourteen years, passed through here Saturday on his way to Almonte, Ont. Mr. Scott is the manager of a sugar plantation. He is of the opinion that annexation is the final destiny of the islands, although a vote of the people at present would probably show a large majority opposed to such a union. The natives, who are in the majority, would vote for the old monarch, while the whites would be practically unanimous for a change of government. He thinks the provisional government would be wise to defer plebiscite for a few years to give the natives time to acquire confidence in republican institutions.

SHOT HERSELF.

While Visiting at Chicago Miss Derby Committed Suicide.

Troubled With Insomnia She Did Not Wish to Live Any Longer—Taken to Her Washington Home.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Miss Mary T. Derby shot herself through the heart some time last evening in her apartments, at [illegible] Forty-sixth street, the home of W. A. Shaw, where she was visiting in company with her brother-in-law Captain Black, of the United States army.

Miss Derby was a resident of Washington, from which place she had come for the purpose of visiting the world's fair. In company with Captain Black she reached the city a week ago and had since been stopping at the above number. The young woman had been much troubled for some time with insomnia, and so depressing had the effect been upon her that she had more than once said she wished she were dead.

While suffering from this malady Miss Derby unquestionably determined upon suicide, and successfully carried her intention into execution some time between 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and 8 o'clock last night. When the body was found in her room at 9 o'clock the indications were that she had been dead for several hours.

In her right hand she clutched a small 32 calibre revolver. The bullet had gone squarely through the heart and the skin was blackened with the stains of powder. Death must have been instantaneous.

Miss Derby was the daughter of the late General Derby, of the United States army, and lived with her brother, Capt George W. Derby, in Washington, D. C. She was thirty one years of age, and spent much of her life at the national capital, where her brother is stationed, and where her father lived several years before his death. She was well known in army circles throughout the country, and had spent several weeks at West Point during the commencement exercises of this year. After the coroner's inquest the remains will be shipped to Washington for burial.

John A. McCeard, of Pine Bluff, Arkansas, committed suicide in his room at the Union hotel early this morning by shooting himself in the head. He was known to be a gambler and, it is thought, committed the act in a fit of despondency.

ALL THREE MAY DIE

As a Result of Trying to Beat the Record in Descending Pike's Peak.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Aug. 8.—Yesterday Richard Woods, a Manitou hack driver, and two other men tried to beat all previous records of speed in descending Pike's peak on a contrivance called a toboggan by the railroad men. This consists of a flat board nailed over a grove which fits closely on the track rail of the cog road. Below the point there is a sharp turn that is known as Son-of-a-gun hill, which is the steepest point in the whole road.

The rack must have become useless for the toboggan with its human freight shot down the incline beyond all control. At the first slight turn the frail board jumped from the rails, leaping into the air for a fearful distance, and throwing the three men away out over the mountain side. None of the men struck the earth within thirty feet of the track and one of them, Wood, landed fully seventy-five feet away. All three may die.

CLEVERLY PLANNED.

The Escape of a Convict from the Mississippi Prison.

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 8.—Last night C. O. Summers, a railroad detective, who was placed in the penitentiary last February for five years for robbing the Southern Express company at Meridian of $5,000, played a cunning trick on a newly appointed guard and escaped. The prison is enclosed by a twenty-foot brick wall. Summers went to the wall and calling to Henry Riley, the guard, said: "Sergeant Lacey says come down and let me take your gun on the wall." Riley dropped the keys and Summers unlocked the door and scaled the wall, while Riley went after the sergeant and inquired what was wanted. The sergeant quickly saw through the trick, but before he could reach the wall Summers had donned the guard's extra suit and escaped.

THE WEST DON'T LIKE IT.

They Find Nothing Pleasing in the Message.

DENVER, Col., Aug. 8.—The president's message was printed and on the streets shortly after 11 o'clock this morning. There is general disappointment over its recommendations, the people finding nothing in it that would tend to the relief of this section. There is some hope, however, found in a statement printed this morning and coming from Washington that the president has intimated that he would not oppose a renewal of the Bland act of 1878.

HE TOOK $41,000.

Flight of the Cashier and the Failure of the Bank.

ALTAMONT, Ill., Aug. 8.—The banking house of C. M. Wright & Co., suspended yesterday. The cashier, Levi Butler, is missing. He left a letter saying that he took $41,000. It is said the depositors will be paid in full.

Death of Charles Otis.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Charles G. Otis, of passenger elevator fame, died at his residence in Brooklyn yesterday afternoon, from the effect of a violent attack of asthma. He was born in Troy, N. Y., in 1811.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Desperate Women Court Death in a Horrible Manner.

They Lay Down Upon the Nickel Plate Railway Tracks and Wait to Be Ground to Pieces.

Two dissolute women, whose names are unknown, made a desperate attempt to commit suicide Sunday night, at a point on the Nickel Plate railroad, not far from the Grand Rapids and Indiana crossing. The women walked down the track of the Grand Rapids road to the crossing and then took the Nickel Plate with the intention of coming to this city. Both were intoxicated. Not far from the crossing they both lay down on the tracks and put their heads upon the rails. A freight train was approaching, but both women were evidently determined to end their lives, as they never moved. Watchman Lafayette Piatt, of the Nickel Plate, saw the two women, and pulled them off just in time to save them. The women seemed disappointed at not being allowed to end their lives. They were driven off the track by the watchmen. The case is shrouded in mystery.

HAPPY MARRIAGE.

A. A. Reinhart and Miss Heiney United in Marriage at St. Mary's Church This Morning.

This morning at 8:30, at St. Mary's church, occurred the marriage of two of Fort Wayne's well known and popular young people, Mr. A. A. Reinhart and Miss Lizzie Heiney. The ceremony was solemnized by three priests, Rev. J. H. Oechtering, celebrant; Rev. Rudolph Denk, deacon, Rev. George Lauer, sub-deacon. Miss Maggie Heiney, sister of the bride, and Mr. John Reinhart, brother of the groom, officiated as bridesmaid and groomsman. The bride was attired in a beautiful costume of green faille silk. The going-away gown was a brown serge trimmed in brown Lonsdowne. After the ceremony a bridal repast was partaken of at the home of the bride's parents. The bride and groom left for a week's visit to the world's fair. They will be at home to their friends after August 15, at 238 East Washington street. Mr. Reinhart is connected with the gents' furnishing business of E. J. Golden, and is the president of the Young Men's Sodality. The bride is the accomplished daughter of Mr. Heiney, of Trentman's wholesale house.

HELD UP.

A Young Tramp Choked and Robbed of $10 by Two Colored Companions This Morning.

This morning a young tramp named Calvin Bean was held up and robbed of $10 by two colored companions, on the Wabash railway, not far from the old fair grounds. The young man was eating a lunch with the two negroes, when they sprang upon him and, choking him, took his money. He reported the fact to the sheriff, who went out to try to find the thieves.

Deceased was an old settler, having come to Fort Wayne in September, 1844, from Ohio, and has resided in and about this city ever since. She leaves her aged husband and ten children to mourn her loss as follows: Andrew W., John, Charles, Henry, Jacob J., of Cleburne, Texas, Mrs. Sarah Doninge, of this city; Mrs. Martha Flemming, of Jackson, Mich.; Mrs. Rose Knight, of this city, Mrs. Mary Thompson, of Elkhart, Ind., and Miss Alice. The funeral will be from the residence of Mrs. Doninge, No. 32 East Third street, the date not yet settled, but pending word from absent children.

JUDGE SAYLER.

He Delivers an Interesting Address on Temperance Topics.

Other Meetings of a Similar Nature Will be Given by the Local Prohibition Club.

A little band of earnest temperance people stood at the east side of the court house square, last evening, and listened to the eloquent words of a learned jurist, Judge H. B. Sayler, of Huntington, who plead for the preservation of home, the manhood of the republic and the suppression of the monstrous traffic of rum. The voices of innocent childhood singing the inspiring songs of the workers in this rightous cause sounded sweetly on the evening air and after an invocation to the Supreme Being by one present, Judge Sayler began his remarks: "We are," said he, "in one of the most remarkable epochs in our nation's history. Today congress assembled at Washington for the purpose of endeavoring to solve the problem of the great evil of financial depression, which is everywhere prevailing over our land." Silver was foreign to Judge Sayler's address, but he could not resist the temptation of expressing his views briefly upon this subject.

While his silver theory was not infallible, none can deny the truth of his words upon the temperance questions. Continuing, he said: "There is yet a greater evil than that of depressed markets and financial stringency—it is the evil of intemperance. The politician at Washington sits astride a fence and he dare not antagonize the liquor interests of this country. I am glad to enroll myself with the party which dares to face the greatest enemy which has ever menaced our fair land, and the remaining years of my life will be found fighting for the cause of temperance and giving the liquor traffic a black eye whenever I get a chance." Continuing, the speaker presented some startling statistics as to the consumption of spirits and fermented liquors in the United States. He stated that since 1863 the consumption of spirituous liquors had increased from 15,000,000 gallons to 95,415,787 gallons in 1892, an increase of 500 per cent., while the increase in population was only 129 per cent. The increase in the consumption of fermented drinks was even in a more alarming proportion. "If all the saloons in the United States were placed side by side," said he, "allowing twenty feet for each saloon, they would form two sides of an unbroken street from Fort Wayne to within twenty miles of Pittsburg. Think of it! What a spectacle for contemplation! If the 8,100 saloons of Indiana were put side by side in a similar manner they would form an unbroken street reaching all the way to Roanoke. If the 285 saloons in Allen county were put side by side they would form a street from the court house to the Wabash and Pennsylvania depots, and that, mind you, not allowing for cross streets."

Judge Sayler continued his remarks in a similar strain and was closely followed by all present. He was frequently applauded and showed by his manner that he was dreadfully in earnest. "Oh! I could talk all night upon this subject," said he, "and then not say half of what should be said against the monster, drink."

At the conclusion of Judge Sayler's remarks there was more singing by the Juvenile Templars and it was also announced that other such meetings would be held from time to time. The gathering was then adjourned.

While playing about a sand heap, thrown up by the steam dredge which had been working along the Maumee river, a boy by the name of Gates found a curious relic. It was a cast iron canister shot, weighing nine pounds. The shot was evidently one used in the days of Anthony Wayne, as it was of an extremely old pattern and unlike those used at a later date. The shot had evidently been thrown into the river during some fight and the fuse extinguished by the water. The relic was purchased by Gilbert L. Fox and is now on exhibition in Sharp's grocery store, Lakeside. The boy of whom Fox bought the shot had been pounding it around and was cautioned not to handle it too carelessly, as such things have been known to explode even after having lain buried many years.

It is about time to call a halt upon the Sunday lager beer picnics. They are giving our city too many Monday morning drunks in police court, and unfitting many others for Monday work.

The secretary general of the eleventh international medical congress, which was to have been held in Rome on September 21, cables from Genoa that the congress has been postponed to April, 1894.

The congressmen who are most ready to air their opinions on finance are generally those whose opinions have least value. This is one of the occasions when the country has very little use for the talkative crank or the man who knows it all.

Let us have a short special session of congress. There is no occasion for our national legislators to spend too much time in talking. Let congress get down to business at once. The special session of 1861, called to meet the new and appalling issues of civil war, met on the 4th of July and ended on the 5th of August.

Governor Matthews has appointed Henry G. Thayer, of Plymouth county, as a member of the board of world's fair managers for Indiana, to succeed Clem Studebaker, resigned. The appointee is a business man of fine ability and some years ago was the nominee of the republicans of the district for congress. Under the act creating the board Studebaker's successor had to be a republican.

The Sunday desecrators are not making any money by keeping the world's fair open on Sunday. From 104,291 paid admissions on Saturday, the attendance dropped last Sunday to 16,-[illegible]. Of these 6[illegible] were children. This makes the total receipts of Superintendent Tucker's department Sunday only $7,[illegible]. This, of course, does not come anywhere near paying the necessary expenses of keeping the gates open.

Cleveland's Message.

The message of President Cleveland delivered at the special session of congress, now convened at Washington, which we print in today's SENTINEL, is full of interest and importance, and will no doubt be more generally read than any president's message which has ever been sent to congress.

It is clear and practical, and deals in a statesmanlike way with the great silver question which is now agitating not only this country but almost every nation upon the globe, and hence his words and thoughts upon it will attract world-wide attention.

He believes that the silver purchasing policy followed by the government has been the means, to a great extent, of causing the present business depression of the country, and advises its prompt stoppage by the repeal of the Sherman law, thus putting an end to the depletion of our gold, giving us a sound and stable currency and thus restoring confidence in business and financial circles. There is no uncertain sound to Mr. Cleveland's message. He gives good advice and congress should heed it.

The whole country, outside of the insane silver champions, demands the repeal of at least the silver purchasing clause of the Sherman law, and it is generally admitted that we cannot have restored credit until that feature of our present monied system shall have been obliterated. This piece of evil legislation has brought us to the verge of a business panic and it is time for partisans to go to the rear and for patriotic business men of every political faith to come to the front and demand the repeal of this vicious and ruinous measure. A sound financial policy is the first necessity of a nation, and until that shall have been established all party considerations should be made subordinate to the common welfare. The people expect the present congress to do their duty and it should be done by getting rid of this iniquitous disturber of monetary affairs as soon as possible. The quicker the better. There is no room for debate.

The question of repealing the Sherman law and stopping the purchase of silver is no longer debatable. It has been decided by the press and the people and all congress has to do is to [illegible] [illegible] repeal the [illegible] and stop [illegible]

Having done this congress should take [illegible] leaving to the proper committees the careful and patient preparation of tariff and money reform measures to be considered not later than October. With wisely chosen committees on ways and means and banking and currency, both tariff reform and a sound and liberal currency system could be adopted early in the fall.

The money question is not the only all-important one just now. As soon as possible congress should direct its attention to the great subject of tariff reform and relieve the people of another burden that is oppressing them and preventing our nation from rising to that degree of prosperity which it should. Let the tax on imports be reduced to a revenue basis and let there be no favored class, no trusts, no monopolies in this free country of ours, but let all stand on a common level and enjoy unhampered those rights and privileges which Providence in His wisdom designed that we should enjoy.

How He Built His Great Fortune.

[illegible] stories of long years of [illegible] pluck and perseverance that became the architects of their own fortunes and hardly one of them [illegible] got into books [illegible] to [illegible] poor boys to go and be the [illegible] of their own fortunes [illegible] found fascination for poor and ambitious young people, as well as for the [illegible] of the world.

We know such a story that has never been told. It shows how a man can become very wealthy from an exceedingly poor beginning, poor in many ways. Once there was an Italian who came to this happy land of freedom determined to be rich. He did not care particularly how he got so, but rich he resolved to be. Like so many other men who are bound to be rich, he picked up the first thing he found. It happened to be a hand organ, a secondhand, wheezy one at that. But what seems a wheezy more or less to the architect of his own fortune? The brave Italian walked with the organ strapped to his back. Wherever he found a group of young ones, there he unstrapped his music and let its dolorous strains vex the air till the children's mothers and fathers and all the boarders were driven half crazy and paid dozens of coppers to get rid of it. In that way he laid the foundation of his fortune.

On good days like Fourth of July, or at times when he happened in front of houses where anybody was ill or was trying to write poetry, the kind people who pitied themselves because they had to listen to his music shelled out handsomely, and in the evening when he went to the corner grocery to get his copper cents changed into silver and paper money he showed for his day's earnings sometimes $10 or $11. This made the grocery man declare that he himself was going to start out and grind an organ too. The newspaper man who lived over the grocery said he would also. But they never did.

At last came the happy day—the day when industry and frugality were rewarded. He had slept in a hole in the wall and eaten things that we don't wish to describe very particularly, but he had saved his dimes and nickels. He resolved to end his wandering life and open a permanent business. He did so, beginning in a very humble way at first, as was proper for the man who was determined to be self made. He hired some of his compatriots to follow up the great city dumping grounds and extract therefrom fragments of paper and clothing that had outlived their original intention. These they brought to the man who was carving a fortune. The compatriots toiled for him daily, and he waited, knowing that the mills of the gods grind slowly and that it would be some months before he could have still more base hirelings at his beck and call.

But his progress was rapid on the whole. Now he is the greatest merchant of rags in that whole section of country. He has bought real estate not a little and profited by the unearned increment. His children belong to the Four Hundred. He is able to dictate to the city just what streets shall or shall not be run through his part of town. He is also able to give large sums of money to the party every presidential year. There is even talk of electing him to a certain legislative office in his state.

This story shows how a man who is determined to be rich may rise from a humble organ grinder to become a millionaire and go into politics.

America has many curiosities, but not many ruins, except moral ones, and no patron saint at all. This last defect will be remedied, however, in the course of a few years. His holiness Pope Leo has announced in this jubilee year of America that he will canonize Christopher Columbus, and Chris will henceforth be the patron saint of this new world. He will be the newest saint of any, considered in the light of a patron, but he will be just as good for all that as either St. George or St. Patrick or any of the others. The pope has said that he will shortly beatify Christopher. The process of canonization will take place afterward. It is to be hoped that Pope Leo, who likes America so well, will live to complete the canonization. It will be necessary to find a new name for Columbus, there being already one St. Christopher.

On a July evening at dusk two boys sat near the crest of a grass grown embankment by the railroad at the western side of a Pennsylvania town. They talked in low tones of the city's glory, about where the sun had set beyond the low hills across the river, and also of the stars and of the moon, which was over the housetops behind them. There was noise of insects' chirping in the grass and of steam escaping from locomotive boilers in the engine shed.

A rumble sounded from the north, and in that direction a locomotive headlight came into view. It neared as the rumble grew louder, and soon a freight train appeared. This rolled past at the foot of the embankment.

From between the two grain cars leaped a man and after him another. So rapidly was the train moving that they seemed to be hurled from it. Both alighted upon their feet. One, tall and lithe, led the way up the embankment, followed by the other, who was short and stocky.

"Bums," whispered one of the boys at the top of the embankment.

The tramps stood still when they reached the top. Even in the half light it could be seen that their clothes were ill fitting, frayed and torn. They wore cast off hats, the tall man, whose face was clean cut and made a pretense of being smooth shaven, had a pliable one, the other was capped by a dented Derby.

"Here's yer town at last! And it looks like a very gay place at that," said the short tramp to the tall one, casting his eyes toward the house roofs eastward.

The boys, sitting twenty feet away, became silent and cautiously watched the newcomers.

"Yep," replied the tall tramp, in a deep but serious and quiet voice; "and right about here's the spot where I jumped on a freight train fifteen years ago, the night I ran away from home. That seems like yesterday, though I've not been here since."

"Skipped a good home because the old lady brought you a new dad! You wouldn't catch me being run out by no stepfather! Billy, you was rash!"

"Maybe I was. But, on the dead, Pete, it was mostly jealousy. I thought my mother couldn't care for me any more if she could take a second husband. My sister thought so, too, but she wasn't able to get away, like me! Of course I was wrong. It was boyish pique drove me away. I didn't fancy having another man in my dead father's place, either. And I wanted to get around and see the world a bit. After I'd gone I often wished I hadn't. I'd never imagined how much I loved mother and sis. But I was tougher and prouder in some ways than most kids. You can't understand that sort of thing, Pete. And you can't guess how I feel, bein' back here for the first time in fifteen years. Think of it, I was just 15 when I came away. Why, I spent half my life here, Pete!"

"Oh, I've read somewhere about that—the way great men feel when they visit their native towns."

The short tramp took a clay pipe from his coat pocket and stuffed into it a cigar end from another pocket. Then he inquired:

"And now you're here, Billy, what are you go'n' to do?"

"Only ask around what's become of my folks, then go away. It won't take long."

"There'll be a through coal train along in about an hour, 'cordin' to what the flagman told us at that last town. Will you be back in time to bounce that?"

"Yes. We needn't stay here. There's little to be picked up in a place like this."

"Then skin along and make yer investigations. I'll sit here and smoke till you come back. If you could pinch a bit o' bread an' meat by the way, it wouldn't hurt."

"I'll try," answered the tall tramp. "I'm goin' to ask the kids yonder, first, if any o' my people still live here."

The tall tramp strode over to the two boys. His companion shambled down the embankment to obtain, at the turntable near the locomotive shed across the railroad, a red-hot cinder with which to light his pipe.

"Do you youngsters know people here by the name of Kershaw?" began the tall tramp, standing beside the two boys.

Both remained sitting on the grass. One shook his head. The other said "No."

The tramp was silent for a moment. Then it occurred to him that his mother had taken his stepfather's name and his sister might be married. Therefore he asked:

"How about a family named Coates?"

"None here," replied one of the boys.

But the other said "Coates? That's the name of Tommy Hackett's grandmother. Don't you know, Dick—old Mrs. Coates."

The tramp grew and expelled a quick, audible breath.

"Then," he said, "this Mrs. Coates must be the mother of Tommy's mother. Do you know what Tommy's mother's first name is?"

"I heard Mum call her Alice once."

The tramp's eyes closed.

"And Mr. Coates?" he inquired.

"Oh, I never heard of him. I guess he died long ago."

"And Tommy Hackett's father who's he?"

"He's the [illegible] at the freight station. Agent, I think, they call him."

"Where does this Mrs. Coates live?"

"She lives with the Hacketts. We'll [illegible] [illegible] see the house? M[illegible] [illegible] just it on the way [illegible] W[illegible]"

[illegible] like to see [illegible]

The boys arose. One of them raised [illegible]. They led the way across the railway company's lot, then along a sparsely built up street, and around a corner into a more populous but quiet highway. At the corner was a grocery and outside [illegible] stood [illegible] were neat and a two story house [illegible] by [illegible] in by [illegible] One of these houses had a little porch on which sat two children. From the open hall door and from two windows came light.

"That's Hackett's house," said one of the boys.

"Thanks, very much," replied the tramp, continuing to walk with them. The boys looked surprised at his not stopping at the house, but they said nothing.

At the next corner the tramp spoke up: "I think I'll go back now. Good night, youngsters."

The boys trudged on and the tramp retraced his steps. When he reached the Hacketts' house he paused at the gate. The children, a boy of [illegible] and a girl of [illegible], looked at him curiously from the piazza.

"Are you Mr. Hackett's little boy and girl," he asked.

The girl stepped back to the hall door and stood there. The boy looked up at the tramp and answered: "Yes, sir."

"Is your mother in?"

"No, she's across the street at Mrs. Johnson's."

"She'll be back soon," added the girl.

"Grandmother's in, though," continued the little boy. "Would you like to see her?"

"No, no! Don't call her. I just wanted to see your mother."

"Do you know mamma?" inquired the girl.

"Well—no! I knew her brother, your uncle."

"We haven't an uncle—except Uncle George, and he's papa's brother," said the boy.

"What! Not an Uncle Will—Uncle Will Kershaw?"

"O—h! yes," assented the boy. "Did you know him before he died? That was a long time ago."

The tramp made no other outward manifestation of his surprise than to be silent and motionless for a time. Presently he said, in a trembling voice, "Yes, before he died. Do you remember when he died?"

"Oh, no. That was when mamma was a girl. She and grandmother often talk about it, though. Uncle Will started West, you know, when he was 15 years old. He was standing on a bridge out near Pittsburg one day, and he saw a little girl fall into the river. He jumped in to save her, but he was drowned, 'cause his head hit a stone and that stunned him. They didn't know it was Uncle Will, or who it was, at first, but mamma read about it in the papers, and Grandpa Coates went out to see if it wasn't Uncle Will. Grandpa identified him and they brought him back here, but what do you think, the doctor wouldn't allow them to open his coffin, and so grandma and mamma couldn't see him. He's buried up in the graveyard, next Grandpa Kershaw, and there's a little monument there that tells all about how he died trying to save a little girl from drownin'. I can read it, but Mamie can't. She's my little sister there."

The tramp had seated himself on the piazza step. He was looking vacantly before him. He remained so until the boy, frightened at his silence, moved farther from him, toward the door. Then the tramp arose suddenly.

"Well," he said, huskily, "I won't wait to see your mamma. You needn't tell her about me bein' here. But, say—could I just get a look at—at your grandma without her knowing anything about it?"

The boy took his sister's hand and withdrew into the doorway. Then he said: "Why, of course. You can see her through the window."

The tramp stood against the edge of the piazza upon his toes, and craned his neck to see through one of the lighted windows. So he remained for several seconds. Once during that time he closed his eyes, and the muscles of his face contracted. Then he opened his eyes again. They were moist.

He could see a gentle old lady, with smooth gray hair and an expression of calm and not unhappy melancholy. She was sitting in a rocking chair, her hands resting on the arms, her look fixed unconsciously on the paper on the wall. She was thinking, and evidently her thoughts, though sad, perhaps, were not keenly painful.

The tramp read that much upon her face. Presently, without a word, he turned quickly about and hurried away, closing the gate after him.

When the two children told about their visitor later their mother said:

"You mustn't talk to strange men, Tommy. You and Mamie should have come right in to grandma."

Their father said: "He was probably looking for a chance to steal something. I'll let the dog out in the yard to-night."

And their grandmother: "I suppose he was only a man who likes to hear children talk, and perhaps, poor fellow, he has no little one of his own."

The tramp now the way to the cemetery. But first he found the house where he had lived as a boy. It looked painfully rickety and surprisingly small. So he hastened from before it and went up by a back street across the town creek and up a hill, where at last he stood before the cemetery gate. It was locked; so he climbed over the wall. He went still further up the hill, past tombstones that looked very white and trees that looked very green in the moonlight. At the top of the hill he found his father's grave. Beside it was another mound, and at the head of this was a plain little pillar. The moon was high now, and the tramp was used to seeing in the night. Word by word he could slowly read upon the marble this inscription:

"William Albert, beloved son of the late Thomas Kershaw and [illegible] Rachel, born at [illegible], August [illegible] 1863, drowned in the Allegheny river near Pittsburg, July 27, 1877, while heroically endeavoring to save the life of a child."

The tramp laughed and then [illegible] [illegible]

"I wonder," he said aloud, "what poor devil it is that's doin' duty for me under the ground here."

And at the thought that he owed an excellent posthumous reputation to the unknown who had happened to resemble him fifteen years before, he [illegible]. Have a moment to say [illegible] he looked up at the moon and [illegible] the cat, as I'd say.

"It's a fine joke we're enjoying between us, isn't it?"

And by and by he remembered that he was being waited for, and he strode from the grave and from the cemetery.

By the railroad the short tramp, having smoked all the refuse tobacco in his possession, was growing impatient. Already the expected coal train had heralded its advent by whistle and puff and roar when his associate joined him.

"Found out all you wanted to know?" queried the stout little vagabond, starting down the embankment to mount the train.

"Yep," answered the tall vagrant, curtly.

The small man grasped the iron rod attached to the side of one of the moving coal cars and swung his foot into the iron stirrup beneath. His companion mounted the next car in the same way.

"Are you all right, Kersh?" shouted back the short tramp, standing safe above the "bumpers."

"All right," replied the tall tramp, climbing up the end of a car. "But don't ever call me Kersh any more. After this I'm always Bill the Bum. Bill Kershaw's dead," and he added to himself: "and decently buried on the hill over there under the moon."

WELLS, THE PLUNGER.

The Man Who Wins Enormous Sums at Monte Carlo.

Here is a picture of Wells, the English plunger at Monte Carlo. Imagine a common-looking, bald man, with a black beard, and coarse hands bedecked with diamonds which the corner man in a nigger troupe might envy, seated at the Trente et Quarante table nearest the door, playing persistently with a perfect haystack of thousand-franc notes before him, and you have Mr. Wells. The crowd is thicker and denser round the table than usual, even when the season is at its height, and when fashionable and other Monte Carlo celebrities abound with maximums. Three times has the bank had to send for more money through the persistent winning of the so far triumphant Wells. In the evening he is still there, and the haystack of mille notes looks bigger.

But as to the Wells system, the most knowing people declare he has none, and is simply a plunger at heavy stakes, winning heavily when he is lucky, as on the first notable visit, and losing when unlucky, as at his second a few weeks ago. Up to the present, fortune has been in his favor.

Wool Is a Plant.

Wool is a kind of hair, and that hair is simply a species of plant rooted in the skin of animals. Through the whole range of human, plant, goat's hair and sheep's wool, however, nature shows such close gradation that it would be difficult to draw an exact line or to distinguish beyond a question of doubt between wool and hair.

Consumption in Prison.

Between the ages of 20 and 40 prisoners die of consumption much more rapidly than people outside of confinement, but whether this is owing to the confinement or to the previous lives of the convicts is not clear. Few criminals of any kind live to be old men.

Size of the Body.

It is stated that the height of the human body is generally ten times the length of the face, the face is as long as the hand; the arm is four times the length of the face; the sole is one-sixth the length of the body, and six times the thickness of the hand equals the thickness of the body.

A Costly Dinner.

The costliest dinner set ever made was by Tiffany. Mr. Mackay brought from his mines $75,000 worth of bullion and this the jewelers made up into a service, asking $20,000 for the work, making the cost in all $95,000, and no sovereign in Europe eats from such a gorgeous plate.

A French merchant tried to corner coffee. The police in setting the matter found grounds for clapping the merchant into jail. Such wanton interference would spoil almost any corner, and there are a number in this country that need spoiling.

SNAKE AND MONGOOSE.

Even the Deadly Cobra no Match for the Nervy Little Creature.

The mongoose is a deadly enemy to snakes, and, although a little creature, not in the least formidable in appearance, it has no hesitation in attacking the largest serpents. The author of "Sport in Southern India" thus describes the animal's method of warfare.

"One of our officers," says the writer, "had a tame mongoose, a charming little pet. Whenever we could procure a cobra we used to turn it into an empty store-room, which had a window high up from the ground, so that it was perfectly safe to stand there and look on.

"The cobra, when dropped from the bag or basket, would wriggle into one of the corners of the room and there coil itself up. The mongoose showed the greatest excitement when he was brought to the window, and would eagerly jump down into the room the moment he was let loose; and there his behavior became very curious and interesting. He would instantly round his back, making every hair stand up at right angles, and approach the cobra on tiptoe, with a peculiar humming kind of noise. The snake, in the meantime, would show signs of great anxiety, erecting its head and hood in order to be ready to strike when its enemy should come near enough.

"Then the mongoose would run backward and forward in front of the snake, getting within what appeared to be striking distance. The snake would thrust at him repeatedly, and appear to hit him, but the mongoose, quite unconcerned, would continue his comical dance.

"Suddenly, with a movement so rapid that the eye could not follow it, he would pin the cobra by the back of the head. One could hear the sharp teeth crunch into the snake's skull, and in a second all was over. After the battle the mongoose would eat the snake's head and a part of its body with great gusto.

"Its own safety lies in its perfect judgment of the distance the snake can strike. The increase of its apparent size, from its hair standing out at right angles, deceives the snake, so that its fangs never really touch the body of the mongoose at all. They only graze the tips of its hair.

FINE GLASS.

Care of Bottles, and an Old Remedy Exploded.

We sometimes read very curious directions for doing very simple things. It is among the oldest of notions that birdshot is useful for cleaning bottles, decanters etc., and it may be in some cases, but one may not use it for fine glass, or that which is in any way delicate.

Many valuable bottles and decanters have been broken by the use of shot. It does very well for coarse, common, heavy glass, and one might naturally suppose that this was the sort that must have been used by women who recommended it.

The ideal material for doing this sort of work is coarse sand. Gather a panful of ordinary sand from any washout on the roadway. Pass it through a common sieve and put it away for that purpose. Half a cupful thrown into a bottle and shaken about will scour the inside as clean as can be. It must be used with care, however, as too long shaking is likely to scratch the inside of the bottle.

For very fine glass a potato cut in pieces the size of small dice is preferable as a cleaning agent. This cannot possibly scratch, and although it takes more time to achieve the desired result, it is done with no risk to the finish of the article. Good, clean sifted sand has many uses. If one cannot obtain that which is perfectly clean, ordinary sand that has been washed down by the roadside may be used. Throw a panful of this into a tub and pour in water, stirring vigorously, until all of the muddy look is washed out. When the water shows perfectly clear after being stirred up, the sand is clean. It may then be dried and put away in a bag or box for future use.

Hydrophobia!

Dogs transmit it through their teeth. Teeth should be kept free from virus. Use SOZODONT, keep the human teeth clean, and no damage can be done by the man who says to his girl, "I feel like eating you up, dearest."

Ancient Manuscripts.

The most ancient Christian manuscripts in existence are the three great codices of the entire scripture—the Vatican, the Alexandrine and the Sinaitic codex. They were written, it is generally conceded, in the fourth century. The Vatican codex has been for centuries in the Vatican library and is looked on as the most precious of the three. The Alexandrine, so called because it was brought to England from Alexandria about the middle of the seventeenth century, is kept in the British museum at London; and the Sinaitic, so-called because discovered by Tischendorf about forty years ago in the convent of Mount Sinai, is preserved at St. Petersburg.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Some notion of the vastness of the Western forests may be had from the fact that a new logging camp just established at the headwaters of the Skagit River, in Washington is under contract to turn out an average of about a million feet every month. Five camps on the Skagit will turn out twenty-five million feet of fir logs alone this year.

B. F. Campbell, P. Titus, E. Jamey and D. V. North, engineers, and G. Ek, J. Fry, M. Walker and H. S. Brown, firemen, have returned to their respective positions on the road, after an absence for various reasons.

James C. Craig, who is afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism, walked about too much yesterday and is again down with the disease. He had hopes of resuming his work, that of conductor on the Pittsburg, this week, but that is now out of the question.

Last evening a jolly party of citizens of California, Pa., occupied a special car in the second section of No. 9, a westbound Pittsburg train. The party was in charge of Bankers Ailes and Binns, of California, and they were bound for the world's fair.

Complaint reaches this office of the manner in which the crossing on Calhoun street at the depot is obstructed by trucks and other vehicles when the safety gates are down. A passage should be made for the pedestrians by compelling vehicles to remain back from the crossing a few feet, at least. As matters now stand, pedestrians are frequently compelled to wait until the gates are raised and a long string of vehicles pass before they can cross the street.

E. V. Debs and G. W. Howard Sunday addressed a meeting of railroad men in Evansville, in the interest of the new railway organization.

Conductor Short, of the Nickel Plate, has a lame hand, which keeps him from his duties. The hand was injured while working in his garden last Thursday.

Allen Hamilton, the well known Pittsburg machinist, left this morning for Wisconsin to visit relatives. He will stop a few days at the world's fair en route west.

Employes in the shops of the Peoria, Decatur and Evansville road have struck because the force has been reduced and the hours of those remaining shortened.

The five hour train between Boston and New York, over the New York, New Haven and Hartford and the Boston and Albany, is to be known as the "Bay State Limited."

C. B. Crocker, the Nickel Plate brakeman, who had the misfortune to sprain one of his ankles badly two months ago, reported for duty yesterday. He has entirely recovered.

E. E. Clark, grand chief conductor of the Order of Railway Conductors, has assumed editorial management of the Railway Conductor, the official organ of the association, vice Wm. Daniels, resigned.

J. G. Wooley, for many years an engineer on the Jeffersonville, Madison and Indianapolis, but late on the Kentucky Union, died at Dundee, Ky., on Friday, and was buried Sunday at Jeffersonville.

J. H. Hutchinson, who has been employed in the pattern shop at the Bass works for some time, has resigned and taken a position in the carpenter department of the factory of Rhinesmith & Simonson.

Nelson Thompson, one of the veteran employes of the hardware firm of Coombs & Co., who was thrown out of employment by the change of ownership, has taken a position with the Peters Box and Lumber company.

The combination of the Big Four and the Ohio and Mississippi for the new line between Louisville, Chicago and the northwest has been officially promulgated, and tickets by this line are to be placed on sale at all ticket offices.

The Elkhart Review says that the Lake Shore railway has laid off altogether ninety seven firemen. Fourteen engines are lying idle in the round house at Elkhart, and they have been painted to protect them from rust.

Conductor Peter Travis has so far recovered as to be able to leave the St. Joseph hospital and return to his home, 65 Brackenridge street. He can walk quite comfortably with the assistance of a cane. This will be glad news to the genial conductor's hosts of friends.

Engineer A. Johnson and Fireman C. H. Piatt are out today testing the valves of No. 255, a new class X passenger engine, just out of the Fort Wayne shops. A. H. Polhamus, road foreman; P. F. Smith, assistant road foreman, and Dr. J. M. Kells also went out with the engine.

The following item appeared in Monday's Indianapolis Journal: "L. G. Hughes, for several years past engineer of maintenance of way on the Pittsburg, Youngstown and Ashtabula road, has accepted a similar position on the western division of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago. He is succeeded by Thomas King, who was supervisor on the Erie and Pittsburg, with headquarters at Niles, instead of Youngstown."

Yesterday R. G. Thompson received twenty large maps of the United States, all handsomely framed and equipped with hangers, from Rand, McNally & Co., of Chicago. The maps are 4x5 feet in size and are said to be perfect in a geographical sense, every city, railway, water course, etc., of any importance being plainly and correctly located. The maps are similar to all first class charts with one exception—the Wabash lines are traced in red ink. Mr. Thompson will hang the maps in hotels and other conspicuous places. They are handsome and will be an ornament to any room.

WHILE DELIRIOUS

John Finn Attempts a Quadruple Murder and Then Suicides.

St. Louis, Aug. 8.—John Finn, living at No. 2821 Chouteau avenue, attempted a quadruple murder and suicide at his residence early this morning. Finn was formerly a motorman on the Lindell street railway. He has been confined to his house for several days with an attack of bilious fever. This morning his condition became worse and his wife left the house to procure some medicine. In her absence it is believed Finn became delirious. He jumped from his bed and, seizing a heavy flat iron, attempted to dash out the brains of his two little boys. He then grasped a carving knife and horribly cut and mangled his two little daughters. Believing that he had killed the four little children, Finn drew the blade across his throat, inflicting a wound from which his death is expected. The injuries to the children are of such a nature that they will die.

Our annual friend, the Delaware peach crop, is all right, and the anxious nation now breathes easily.

GOING TO WORLD'S FAIR?

A Remarkable Hotel That It Will Pay to Visit.

The Beautiful Building Put Up Within the Past Few Months.

Erected by C. E. Brown, the Well Known Chicago Merchant.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—If one goes to the World's Fair there is a substantial, comfortable hotel that it will pay him to visit.

The proprietor, Mr. C. E. Brown, is a well known and successful merchant, 46[illegible] State Street.

The story of how he came to put up the hotel is interesting.

To use the words of its energetic and successful proprietor, Paine's celery compound (the remedy that makes people well) built it.

MERCHANT BROWN.

Mr. Brown says:

"Believing it to be a duty that every man should acknowledge and recommend that which has done him good is the cause of this statement, which to give all particulars, must go back to my boyhood days. When about 12 years old we moved to central Illinois where for three years I had 'the shakes,' or ague, which I presume gave me what they called an ague cake or enlargement of the spleen.

"At the age of seventeen I came to Chicago and entered the old Chicago university, but my health was so poor that I could not make much progress with my studies, and from that time until about eight years ago I was sick more or less without any one being able to tell just what was the trouble, or to give me any relief.

"Eight years ago while lying aboard my yacht in Milwaukee harbor I awoke one morning but was unable to get up or move. Dr. Adam Miller was called and he pronounced my trouble dropsy of the heart. After about six weeks of hard fighting and my determination not to die I got up, but was not well, and had to continue taking medicine. About two years ago I lost my wife, the worst thing that could happen to a man. I had a very sick spell after that. A friend then recommended Paine's celery compound, and I took six bottles of it and it put me on my feet again, and I am feeling, and have felt for the past year, the best I ever did in my life. I take no medicine at all now. A short time ago I bought six more bottles of Paine's celery compound. Five of them I gave to friends. I have recommended it to many of my customers and friends both here and at Central Falls, R. I., and I fail to hear of a single one it has not done good. Even a Mrs. Yeager, who has stood out a long time from taking it, said 'it was the best thing that she ever tried.'

"I believe that Paine's celery compound was the means of curing me of the dropsy and making me well, so that I was able to take up the battle of life again. And I have built during the last four months a beautiful building, and I have been so well that I have stood every day upon its walls fully eight hours a day, from the time of throwing the first shovel of dirt. I now have 125 rooms for World's Fair visitors, and if any of your friends are coming to the World's Fair, just tell them to stop at Brown's hotel that Paine's celery compound built, and they will find it well built, no crumbling walls or fire traps, but solid and substantial like the writer.

"I am surprised at myself being able to stand so much work and the long hours from 7 a. m. to midnight, and on the jump all the time. I have been confined [illegible], which used to make me very nervous. My feeling will look [illegible] of what your compound has done, and shall recommend it the longest day I live.

"I can refer you to Marshall Field & Co., Keith Bros., and many other Chicago merchants in regard to my standing," says Mr. Brown, "or you can write to Dr. Miller, who has been my family physician for a good many years, although I am glad to say that I have not been obliged to call on him for over a year."

A table of statistics might be prepared, giving the names of men and women from every state in the union, of every age, the rich and the poor, and from every condition in life. There is not a city or village in the United States where Paine's celery compound is not known and prescribed. It has cured nervous diseases, rheumatism, kidney disorders and liver complaint, where everything else has failed and where the patients had been despaired of. It makes people well. Try it.

CHARITY CAMP.

Four Hundred Miners Now Maintained There.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 8.—The charity camp, which has been maintained under military supervision at River Front park for two weeks, was not abandoned today as had been announced and about 400 men are still being fed and lodged in the military tents there. The authorities dare not break up the camp and turn out upon the city a small army of hungry men.

Every effort is being made, however, to discourage unemployed men from the mining towns from coming to the Denver relief camp as it is very difficult to raise funds to feed those already here.

REDUCING WAGES

The New York Central Takes the Initial Step.

New York, Aug. 8.—A notice was posted in the round house of the New York Central railroad at Mott Haven late Saturday night announcing that after today the time of labor of all machinists, car repairers and yardmen would be reduced three hours a day with a corresponding reduction in pay. The men declare that the wages of some employes has been reduced as much as $25 per month.

Chicago Mail: "A cog has slipped in the harmony that has been hovering over the feminine end of the Columbian Exposition ever since Colonel Elliott Cousins was dropped and refused to fall. Women have been having their own way and the last word to an extent hitherto unparalleled in the history of mankind. They have knocked [illegible] who was supposed to be their stronger brother almost out of even the acknowledgment of the patriarchate. [illegible] to have a new grasp on the situation and her daughter's husband's and [illegible] were carrying everything before them and [illegible] masculine man was to [illegible] to the lake as the only path of escape. Herr Pollak, of Europe, appeared in this city. Herr Pollak speaks fifteen languages at the rate of 500 words a minute or 30,000 an hour. This attacks the women on ground they had long believed to be exclusively their own. To have a male able to beat the best record of Mrs. Caudle, and that in the Columbian year, with Isabellas and Berthas and things fairly pervading the atmosphere, is quite too much."

The revenues of the Queen of England and Empress of India are something like $2,000,000 a year. The contribution of [illegible] made by the Queen for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the brave men carried down in the battleship Victoria, again brings before the public the fact that Her Majesty has a distinctly economical turn of mind. In fact, the royal prudence in money matters is so great that if it were not royal the world might call it by the plain, everyday name of stinginess.

To attain to a generous courtesy [illegible] than gentleness and good nature is necessary; some self-denial must be practiced, not with a view of obtaining services in return, as some cynics would have us believe, but because a handsome courtesy surely is twice blessed, breeding in return that reciprocal kindness which we conceive of as governing the behavior of the angels themselves.

Two Florida editors are about to fight a duel. If they really mean business they should scorn the innocuous pistol. Let them rather stand barebacked where the Florida mosquito sings lustiest, and the first to fall acknowledge his defeat. This would appease wounded honor and satisfy the mosquitoes, the latter point being fully as important as the former.

Masters Thomas Travis and Fred Noll are spending two weeks' vacation at Prceeton, Ind., the guests of Frohley Bros.

Mrs. Dr. Lipes has gone to Warsaw to attend the funeral of her grandfather, who died suddenly in that city yesterday.

Mrs. Margaret Westrumb, of 115 East Washington street, wife of H. C. F. Westrumb, who fell backwards into a cellar at the residence of her daughter, at 21 Will street, is too ill to be taken home.

Joseph W. Cope passed through the city on the Pennsylvania's Keystone express Sunday. He stepped from the train and chatted a few minutes with a few of his old friends who happened to be at the depot. Joe was en route to Washington. He looks well and is apparently prosperous. He was member of the North Dakota legislature last winter. Mrs. Cope accompanied her husband as far as this city and is now the guest of Fort Wayne friends.

DESPERATE SUICIDE.

A Former Resident of Fort Wayne Kills Himself.

O. C. Wyckoff Cuts His Throat at Muncie, Ind., and Is Found Cold in Death.

News reached this city from Muncie last evening, of the suicide, Sunday, of O. C. Wyckoff, a former resident of Fort Wayne. The deceased was at one time connected with Charles Grisbel, in the marble business. He was in this city a week ago last Sunday, visiting his wife, who has been the guest of Mrs. Nancy Kegg, at 79 East Washington street. The particulars of the tragedy, as stated in a telegram to the Indianapolis Sentinel last evening, are as follows:

"O. C. Wyckoff, aged thirty eight, was found cold in death this afternoon, at his home, lying in a large pool of clotted blood.

"A gash in one side of his neck and a bloody pocket knife with one blade open told the tale. It is evident that he had been dead since yesterday. Mrs. Wyckoff and her only child, a bright girl, aged nine, are visiting at Fort Wayne, from where the family moved a year ago. Until recently Wyckoff was a partner of Lee Coffen in the Muncie Marble company; also he was president of the Delaware Manufacturing company. He sold out his interest in the marble works a week ago and had material on the ground to build a new home, having recently sold his residence property. When found he had $10 in money and $777 in notes on his person. He had removed his coat, hat and shoes, and there is evidence that he walked about the house after striking the knife blade into the jugular vein. His clothes and the room were besmeared with blood."

The Muncie Daily Herald, in describing the method of suicide, says: "The cut, which was inflicted with a knife, was very deep and severed numerous arteries. The knife was found on the floor, and was so tightly adhered to the bare floor by coagulated blood that Coroner Bowers was forced to kick it loose. The handle bore the dead man's name. It was evident that he had committed suicide, as his watch chain and other valuables were found intact in the room. He was partially crippled in his right arm, and from appearances he seated himself on a chest near the bed, cut his throat with the knife held in his left hand, and fell to the floor near the bed, where the huge pool of blood was found. His shoes were off, and as his socks were bloody, he evidently arose from the floor and staggering through the blood, fell at the foot of the bed and expired."

The funeral will be held in this city tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock from No. 325 West Jefferson street. The remains will arrive this evening.
